

Ellen Crosby is the author of a series of wine country mysteries, the most recent of which are The Sauvignon Secret and The Viognier Vendetta. For the past twenty years, she has been a freelance journalist in the US, London, Moscow, and Geneva, Switzerland, writing feature stories for such publications as The Wall Street Journal, The Christian Science Monitor, and The Washington Post. Before that, Ellen worked as ABC Radio News' Moscow correspondent during the late 1980s. She later wrote her first novel, Moscow Nights, based on her experiences in the former Soviet Union during the waning days of the Gorbachev era. Prior to working as a journalist, Crosby was an economist in the United States Senate. She has a master's degree in international relations from The Johns Hopkins University School of Advanced International Studies and a B.A. in political science from The Catholic University of America. She spent her junior year of undergraduate school in Madrid, Spain and did a semester of graduate studies in Bologna, Italy.

Maureen Corrigan is Critic-in-Residence and a Lecturer in the Department of English at Georgetown University. She is an expert in 19th-century British literature; women's literature, especially autobiography; popular culture; detective fiction; contemporary American literature; and Anglo-Irish literature. She received her Ph.D. and M.A. from the University of Pennsylvania and her B.A. from Fordham University. For the past 18 years, Corrigan has been the book critic for the Peabody Award-winning program, "Fresh Air," heard nationally on NPR. She is also a columnist for Book World in The Washington Post and a regular contributor to many publications. She is the author of Leave Me Alone, I'm Reading: Finding and Losing Myself in Books.
